Dear Management Committee Members

In the recent referendum I voted "YES". Not "YES" to a handover of unilateral power from one system or party to another. Not "YES" for one party or system to have total power, regardless of whether the party is called NP, CP, ANC or whatever. What I did vote "YES" for is a negotiated solution for ALL south Africans.

Why does it seem that CODESA is 'informally' split into two main camps? Are there not many more parties involved in the negotiation process? Why does it seem to be a power play or political jockeying?

Why do the ANC think that they started the negotiation process and that they own it? They simply are another party amongst many in South Africa.

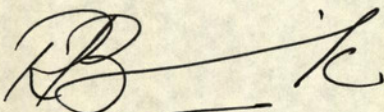

Who has given one party total say? The ANC says NO! to further talks and everthing grinds to a halt. We, the voters never gave them the total say!!

We who voted for negotiations would like to see game playing come to an end and that true negotiations get back on track! We would like to see every represented party get together and call back the 'dissenting member(s)'.

Any solution whereby just one party have total power, whether through voting or handing over of power is simply NOT acceptable!! The vision of CODESA was to find a unique solution where ALL parties/people have an EQUAL say.

Let us then strive to find that unique solution for our own unique situation whereby all people in our beautiful country will have an equal say and will share equally.

Yours faithfully

RONÉL BRINK
